

Bio-Note

Abhishank has been affiliated to the Department of Political Science at Miranda House from 2019. His primary area of research focusses on problematizing the Balance of Power theory within the ambit of the Asia-Pacific region in a bid to generate theoretically generalizable ontologies, analytical conceptualizations and modes of analysis through recourse to history that best encapsulate the modalities of actions and behaviours of the countries of this region. He teaches a host of courses at Miranda House ranging from Political Theory and Philosophy, Political Processes, Constitutional Development , Colonialism and Nationalism, Globalization and International Institutions, Contemporary Political Economy and Peace and Conflict Resolution. Further, Abhishank is interested in Strategic Culture, Grand strategy, Disruptive technologies and Autonomous Weapons, sentience, motivation and modalities of State behaviour and Political Philosophy.